

WOOD QUIRKING WEEKLY

THIS WEEK AT WOODQUIRKING

Unfortunately, other work commitments have seen Dan mostly out of the workshop this past week. He is definitely feeling inspired and eager to get back to it, and start work on some new projects that have come in – not to mention an escape from the predicted heatwave!

UPCOMING PROJECTS

We still have a lot of projects currently in the works! As is often the way, it has taken us all a little while to settle back into the swing of things after our short break. But we are back restoring, building and video editing this week to get some new videos out to you as soon as possible.

STILL TO COME...

SpongeBob Play Kitchen: With our daughters' first birthday fast approaching, Dan is hoping to complete this fun kitchen makeover within the next few weeks. Dan has made a good start on the painting but we're waiting for a little more of the completed transformation before sharing the progress.

Charity Shop Challenge:

Thinking of what to make with this selection has already been giving Dan sleepless nights, but he thinks he's finally had an idea he is somewhat happy with. Although Dan doesn't seem overly eager to repeat this challenge any time soon, Zoe is already thinking about where she will find her next items!

Edwardian Settee: Plan of action made and fabric chosen! Zoe is eager to make a start by stripping back the old upholstery to see what, if anything, can be salvaged and what needs to be replaced. Zoe will then be handing over the reigns to Dan for some woodwork restoration before the reupholstering can start!

Hand Turned Bowls: Dan is planning to spend a bit of time in the upcoming week turning some small bowls out of a variety of different woods. We are excited to share the results as we have chosen a few slightly different options that will hopefully create some unique finishes.

HAPPY FATHERS DAY TO THE MEN BEHIND WOODQUIRKING!

This throwback photo of Nick hand-stencilling the intricate details of an antique table perfectly captures the skill, patience, and dedication that Nick has brought to his impressive career restoring antiques.

Nick would probably rather we didn't mention him at all, but Father's Day seems like the right time to recognise that there would be no WoodQuirking without him.

His passion for the craft and willingness to share his knowledge are the reasons Dan learned everything he knows today.

We'd also like to celebrate Dan, who is not only carrying those skills forward in the workshop but is also a fantastic father to his daughter.

We hope everyone had a wonderful Father's Day and enjoyed spending time with the people who matter most.
